

Mesoporous Carbon Electrode for Desalination

The technology greatly improves the performance of capacitive deionization, which relies on applying an electric field between carbon electrodes to remove salts and minerals from brackish water and seawater.

Developed and jointly submitted by
Oak Ridge National Laboratory
Campbell Applied Physics

Sponsored by
Department of Energy Office of Science
Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy

(a)

(b)

Recipients (a) (l-r): Craig Blue, Costas Tsouris, Charles Schaich, Richard Mayes, Sheng Dai, David DePaoli, Jim Kiggans, Jr.

(b) (l-r): James Nystrom, Sunita Kaushik, Timothy Pellegrini, Robert L. Campbell

Point of Contact:

Dr. Sheng Dai • dais@ornl.gov • (865) 576-7307