

TERMS AND CONDITIONS: ORNL JUMP INTO STEM COMMUNITY

Introduction:

UT-Battelle, LLC, managing and operating the Oak Ridge National Lab (ORNL) pursuant to its Prime Contract with U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), is hosting multiple crowdsourcing idea challenges, referred to in this website as the JUMP into STEM Challenges (Challenges). Some of these Challenge may be co-sponsored by an Industry Partner. JUMP into STEM Challenge are generally focused on cultivating innovation for energy efficient technologies within the residential and commercial building markets. The goal of JUMP into STEM is to connect university and college students in the STEM fields with buildings sector stakeholders from industry, academia, and government and technology innovators.

The UT-Battelle team will review comments and votes by website users to inform the down-selection of the best ideas with potential for transforming the building energy efficiency technologies market. A shortlist of the top ideas per Challenge will be identified based on an initial down-selection evaluation to be conducted by participating technical liaisons drawn from UT-Battelle staff and industry partners. Shortlisted ideas will be evaluated on criteria such as technical feasibility, energy saving potential, and novelty of the idea. The technical judges will then select the best ideas from each JUMP into STEM Challenge; depending on the Challenge, winning ideas may be eligible for collaborative opportunities including potential webinar presentations, partnerships for continued R&D, and/or an invitation to the eligible winners to apply for a 10 week summer internship *. All Challenges are administered by UT-Battelle using the IdeaScale web platform. IdeaScale, UT-Battelle, and DOE, hereinafter "Supporters," are cooperatively working to administer the Challenges.
